
‘I wanted to study and marry my special friend after becoming financially independent. I could somehow stop my marriage till I was 18 but the sustained torture, threats and insults of my neighbours and family forced me to elope the moment I turned 19.’

“My parents work as day labour and I live at home alone. They arranged my marriage once they got to know I talk to a friend. I am 17 years old.”

“I am not that good in studies or in domestic work. If I get married quickly, my parents will be rid of a burden and can properly focus on my brother. I am 16 years old.”

“During lockdown a proposal for my marriage came without exchange of dowry. My parents agreed to it. I am 17 years old.”

“My parents have approved of my romantic relationship. They have asked me to elope as the police might visit if they organize a wedding.”

An open letter,

We are a group of young boys and girls who reside in rural and suburban areas in West Bengal. We want to express some of our thoughts, opinions, experiences, hopes and fears to you, especially about the recent increase in the legal age of marriage of women from 18 to 21 years.

Who are we? We are a part of the ‘Koishore’; an adolescent group which is part of Bhabna, a West Bengal based network. Bhabna was initiated in 2012 as a West Bengal-based network to work against the custom of child marriage and has been working to raise public awareness in different districts of West Bengal since its inception.

Just like men, even women can get married after they turn 21 now and there is no longer a legal age-related disparity in the age of marriage. For those women who want to pursue higher education and become financially independent – this new law is a positive step towards the right direction. When these women will start earning and contributing towards their natal household financially, their families will not force them to get married. Women will also become mentally developed to the extent that they can decide what is right for them and choose what they want to do in life. By the time they turn 21, these women will be physically matured and will not have to undergo the negative consequences of pregnancy and post-partum complications. With age these women will also become physically and mentally mature and can protest any forms of violence especially domestic violence if they face it themselves.

But what will happen to those girls who don’t want to study, or their parents won’t allow them to study further? In the cities of Bengal, middle class women don’t even think of their marriage at the ages of 18 or 21. Then why is marriage the only way for ‘development’ of women in villages or suburbs? Child marriage could not be stopped even when the legal age of marriage for women was 18. Child marriage and dowry system is increasing parallelly. Due to the physical and mental changes during adolescence, women do not have the space to talk about their sexuality, feelings or desire, hence, they run away from home due to familial and societal pressure. If the age of marriage becomes 21, will the society think about these problems and stop pressurizing us to get married?

Financially underprivileged families consider their daughters to be a burden. In that situation, won’t those families feel pressure if they have to look after the young girls for three more years? There were plenty of instances of child marriages while the legal age of marriage was 18, so will there not be more instances of child marriages now that the age has been increased to 21? For girls who belong to social and economically marginalized communities and would not like to study further but become self-sufficient through alternative means, can their family wait for them to get married till they are 21? If we form romantic relationships, will our society approve and allow us to choose our partner as our right? If we engage in sexual activities consensually, will our families or society stop filing false POCSO or kidnapping cases? Will this step lead to a decrease in women trafficking at all?

‘Beti Bachao, Beti Padhao’, ‘Kanyashree’, ‘Rupashree’ – these schemes have encouraged girls to pursue education. However, if these schemes are withdrawn tomorrow, will these families keep sending their girls to schools or colleges? Have these schemes been able to change the notion that ‘girls are a burden’ or ‘marriage is the only goal for women’?

Apart from legal measures, we want the government and the society to think more about our development and progress indicators (especially for adolescents girls) and to change societal perception about us. To remove the obstacles as mentioned above, the government needs to take the following steps.

We, on behalf of our group, propose the following suggestions:

1. Understanding of issues like child marriage, trafficking and POCSO laws should be included in academic syllabi.
2. School libraries should add more reference and guide books of all classes and subjects so that nobody can be deprived of their education for lack of money to buy books.
3. ‘Kanyashree’ funds (West Bengal) should be regularly transferred every year.
4. A new scheme like ‘Kanyashree’ (West Bengal) should be started for women after they turn 21.
5. The government should take strict steps to ensure that the funds from ‘Kanyashree’ be used for educational purposes only.
6. Allowances should be provided for women pursuing higher education.
7. The government should start vocational training for women who don’t want to pursue formal education.
8. The government should provide easy loans to women for technical training.
9. Themes like gender equality and life skills (solving different problems, self-awareness, decision making, sexuality and inter-personal relationship, tackling pressure, creative thinking, criticism handling, empathy, effective communication, emotional regulation) should be added in the curriculum.
10. The minimum age for receiving ‘Rupashree’ (West Bengal) benefits should be increased from 18 to 21.
11. The government should promote and organize campaigns to raise awareness about the increase in legal age of marriage of girls.
12. Strict punishment should be meted out in cases of child marriage.
13. The Panchayat and Municipal Corporation should promote awareness about gender equality.
14. ‘Anwasha’ clinics should become more efficient.
15. Both young boys and girls should be given mandatory sex education on behalf of the government where they learn about reproductive rights, reproductive health and healthy relationships.
16. The government should ensure psycho-social counselling for parents and other family members of young girls to help change their mind about underage marriage.
17. The Right to Education Act (2009) should be amended to make education till 18 years of age mandatory and ‘free’.
18. Schools must play an active role in ensuring the implementation of schemes like ‘Kanyashree’, ‘Shikhashree’, ‘Yuvashree’, ‘Rupashree’ (West Bengal). To ensure that the benefits are being used for women’s education and development, the money can be sent from the bank to the shops directly.

19. Even in 2021, many government work areas like mining, mechanical, electrical, and railways group 'D' don't have much scope for women's employment. The scope for women's employment in different sectors and for different jobs needs to be increased.

We want our suggestions to be perceived in view of holistic development of adolescent girls. The issue should not only consider that increasing legal age of marriage for girls to 21 years or becoming mothers after 21 is linked to maternal health and decrease in maternal mortality rate. Rather, the Government should also consider poverty eradication, education, health, nutrition, safety, employment, equality, respect and dignity of the future population of the country to consider the economic-socio-political, cultural rights of adolescent girls.

Thanking you,

On behalf of the 'Koishore' Team –
