Dear Mr. Sikri,

Ref: Criminal Law Amendment Bill, 2010: Response of Women’s Groups

This has reference to the Criminal Law Amendment Bill 2010, being proposed by the government, to bring about changes in the Criminal Laws, with respect to protections against sexual assault. The Bill, which incorporates some of the recommendations of the 172nd Report of the Law Commission of India, 2000, is a welcome step and long overdue. However, given the importance of the subject and the experience on the ground of human rights groups combating sexual assault and sexual violence, women’s groups, groups working on child rights and groups working with lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, intersex (LGBTI) people from across the country have come together to reflect on the extent to which this proposed bill addresses concrete concerns on the ground; to identify the major gaps and propose an alternative that might eliminate gaps and ambiguities to the maximum extent possible. We have come together to initiate this effort because of our long-term engagement with the justice process, and feel strongly that any legislation enacted at this stage must address the issue in all its complexity. This is especially important in view of the fact that it has taken thirty years to put the issue on the floor of the parliament a second time, and ten years after the Law Commission made fairly concrete recommendations.

Groups have organized discussions in different cities in the month of March. After this first level of discussions within different cities, the first national meeting to discuss the provisions on sexual assault was held in Mumbai on 10th and 11th April 2010, and in Delhi on 12th and 13th May 2010. Around 200 women – independent scholars, activists, representatives of women’s groups, child rights groups, LGBTI groups, lawyers, rights educators, and representatives of research institutions committed to women’s rights, children’s rights and human rights – participated in these deliberations. The Delhi meeting was followed by a round of e-deliberations on the different elements that a sexual assault law must contain. We present below our key concerns in the form of comments and draft sections.

We sincerely urge the government to take note of the concerns raised in this draft and continue a dialogue with those engaged in this exercise, so that we may put in place a law which is based on evolving international jurisprudence and experience of rights groups on the ground.
Thank you,

Yours sincerely

PART A. STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

1. The Indian Constitution and International Conventions ratified by the Government of India guarantee comprehensive protections against offences against the human body, and safeguard the right to life, bodily integrity and dignity. Consistent with this Constitutional commitment, and in furtherance of the recommendations of the 172nd Report of the Law Commission of India on the reform of rape laws, 2000, The Criminal Law Amendment Bill, 2010 creates a new chapter on sexual offences that provides comprehensive protections to women, children, and all other persons who on account of their sexual, gender or other identities are subjected to sexual violence.

2. Existing provisions relating to sexual violence are scattered across the Indian Penal Code in sections 375, 376, 377, 354 and 509. In their current form, these different sections do not respond to the reality of many different forms of sexual violence; nor do they incorporate a comprehensive understanding of sexual violence itself. The Criminal Law Amendment Bill, 2010 therefore deals with the entire range of sexual violence by introducing new provisions and revising existing provisions, which recognize that sexual violence violates the right to equality, dignity and bodily integrity and that they inflict injury and harm. This Bill seeks to place all provisions relating to sexual violence within a single chapter, in an attempt to provide a comprehensive guarantee to all persons of a life free from such violence and to punish those who perpetrate such violence against them.

3. The Criminal Law Amendment Bill, 2010 recognizes that in a sexual crime, the perpetrator exercises power over women, children and other persons. Sexual assault and sexual humiliation are tools that are used against women and others in situations of conflict such as those based on community, ethnicity, caste and religion in order to target the community that they are part of. Women with disabilities are especially vulnerable to sexual assault and aggravated sexual assault.

4. Sexual crimes form a continuum. Sexual violence includes but is not limited to sexual acts which involve penetration by the penis. They include acts which involve introduction of other parts of the body and objects as well as the use of criminal force, including stripping, parading and mutilation which are intended to sexually assault, degrade or humiliate those who are so targeted. In recognition of the structural and graded nature of sexual violence this Bill grades offences based on concepts of harm, injury, humiliation and degradation, using well-established categories of sexual assault, aggravated sexual assault, and sexual offences.

5. Sexual violence against women is an impediment to the achievement of equality, and their fundamental right to freedom. It is a manifestation of unequal power relations between men and women, prevents women’s full advancement, and is a crucial social mechanism by which women are forced into a subordinate position as compared to men. The notions of dishonour and modesty, on which sections 354 and 509 IPC are premised, do not capture the assaultative and violent nature of sexual offences and the physical, social, emotional and psychological harm caused by them. All sexual offences violate the right to bodily integrity, autonomy and dignity of the person against whom the sexual crime is perpetrated.

6. The Criminal Law Amendment Bill, 2010 recognises that women are not the only individuals targeted by men through sexual violence, but that other persons (based on their sexual, gender or other identities) are also sexually assaulted by men. This includes, among others, the category of transgender persons [by whatever name they are known]. The stigma, discrimination and human rights violations experienced by transgender persons in all aspects of their life because they do not fall clearly into the category of ‘man’ or ‘woman’ and transgress societal gender norms, are being increasingly recognized by civil society, public policies and the judiciary. This Bill recognizes that sexual violence perpetrated against transgender persons is a form of gender-based violence that must be punished. The Criminal Law Amendment Bill, 2010 therefore introduces a new section that defines sexual assaults by men against persons excepting women.

The category of “persons” also includes persons who experience sexual violence because of their sexual orientation. An important factor underlying such sexual violence is the social system, which seeks to suppress sexual diversity. In this context, the Bill makes a departure from the existing legal framework of “unnatural” carnal intercourse and draws the critical distinction between consent and lack of consent. Same-sex violence of a sexual nature, by definition committed against the will of the person on whom the violence is perpetrated, is thus brought within the purview of the Criminal Law Amendment Bill, 2010.

7. The Criminal Law Amendment Bill further recognises that children are also subjected to sexual offences. Sexual violence against children causes serious emotional, psychological and physical harm which, if not addressed, persists throughout their lives. By ratifying the United National Convention on the Rights of the Child, India is committed to take appropriate measures to deal with all forms of sexual violence, exploitation and abuse of children and prescribe a set of standards that ensure child protection and secure best interests of the child, particularly those who are victims of sexual violence and abuse (Articles 19, 34, 35, 36 and 39 of the UNCRC).

That India has high numbers of sexually abused children is well documented and acknowledged by the Government in its various policy and planning documents. Crime records also clearly suggest that sexual violence against children is often by family members, relatives and other people they trust or are known to them. Use of assault and criminal force against children for sexual purposes, sexual offences against children in schools, institutions and other custodial settings, sexual abuse through pornography and other information technology, makes their situation even more vulnerable and calls for special protection measures through law, policy and action. Moreover, recognizing that both girls and boys are victims of sexual violence against children and that the perpetrators too can be of any gender, such crimes against children require a gender-neutral disposition.
The Bill thus provides for comprehensive protections that are gender sensitive, in part through gender specific protections and in part through gender neutral protections, thereby recognising the specific needs of women, children and others such as men and transgender persons [by whatever name they are known] who are also subjected to sexual violence by men.

8. The prosecution in cases of sexual assault depends heavily on the question of consent. In recognition of the fact that this has been defined variously, often to the detriment of women’s interests, the Criminal Law Amendment Bill, 2010 introduces a comprehensive definition of consent, which will guide prosecutors and judiciary in providing protection to victims of sexual assault.

9. It has also been recognized that coercive circumstances -- economic, political and social dominance, positions of authority and situations of custody, ranging from state institutions to the family -- enhance the power of the perpetrator in committing the sexual crime. The Bill introduces a section on aggravated sexual assault that deals with cases of sexual assault that are of a more grievous nature. This may be due to the fact that the perpetrator is in a position of authority or trust; because the victim is in a position of specific disadvantage or vulnerability; because of the aggravated bodily harm suffered; or because the assault has been committed in a context of community-based or sectarian violence. Sexual violence against women in certain specific situations of conflict where they are targeted by reason of their identity including community, ethnicity, caste, religion and language, merits special recognition. This section provides for aggravated circumstances including, but not limited to, the age of the survivor, the use of criminal force, the custodial position of the survivor, the nature of coercive circumstances, and the presence of multiple perpetrators.

The Criminal Law Amendment Bill, 2010 provides for effective and speedy complaint procedures. Remedies including reparation are laid down including protective measures such as safe havens, counseling and rehabilitation and support services for women against whom sexual offences are perpetrated.
PART B. DEFINITIONS

1. ‘Consent’ means the unequivocal voluntary agreement of the woman or person, to engage in the sexual activity in question.

9. “Position of political authority” includes authority vested in all elected representatives of legislative, municipal, panchayat and other bodies performing similar functions.

PART C. DEFINITION OF SEXUAL VIOLENCE. THE PROPOSED DEFINITION MOVES AWAY FROM THE PENETRATIVE REPRODUCTIVE LOGIC TO A MORE NUANCED UNDERSTANDING OF SEXUAL ASSAULT REDEFINED AS SEXUAL VIOLENCE, THAT TAKES INTO ACCOUNT THE RANGE OF SEXUAL VIOLENCE PERPETRATED AGAINST PERSONS, WITH OR WITHOUT THE USE OF CRIMINAL FORCE. THESE INCLUDE ACTS RANGING FROM SEXUAL HARASSMENT TO THE GRAVEST FORMS OF SEXUAL ASSAULT. THESE ACTS ARE TO BE GRADED ACCORDING TO THE DEGREE OF VIOLATION AND PHYSICAL, PSYCHOLOGICAL, EMOTIONAL AND SOCIAL HARM IN THE AWARDING OF PUNISHMENTS. AS ARTICULATED IN THE STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS, THESE SECTIONS MUST TAKE CARE OF SEXUAL VIOLENCE ON WOMEN, PERSONS EXCEPTING WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

I. Sexual Violence on Women. Women are assaulted in ways that range from sexual humiliation to physical assault. Sexual violence forms a continuum, ranging from sexual harassment without the use of criminal force to the gravest forms of assault.

II. Sexual assault on men in custodial situations and otherwise; and on transgender persons. There is by now a realisation that while sexual assault against women continues to be a major concern, children, men, and transgender persons are assaulted – children by family members and strangers; men in custody and because of their sexual orientation in the case of gay men; and transgender persons, the violations against whom have been extensively documented by the Karnataka PUCL.

III. Sexual assault on children – boys and girls

SECTION 375 B: SEXUAL ASSAULT ON PERSON EXCEPTING WOMAN

This section assumes grave importance in the context of sexual violence faced by people because of their sexual, gender or other identities. In light of the inclusion of non consensual sexual acts in this section, and of sexual assault on children being addressed by 375 C of this Bill as well as the Sexual Offences Against Children Bill that is currently in process of being drafted, the rationale for section 377 IPC ceases to exist.

For the purpose of this section, “person” shall mean any person not being a woman. This fact shall be determined through a declaration by the complainant. No medical examination shall be conducted for purposes of the determination of the sex of a complainant of sexual assault. This section includes men as well as transgender persons as victims of sexual violence.
Transgender persons include all those who do not fall clearly into the categories of ‘man’ or ‘woman’. Therefore this section will use the pronouns ‘him’ as well as ‘her’.

A man is said to commit “sexual assault on a person” if he–

(a) Introduces his penis or any body part or object to any extent into the vagina, the anus or urethra, or any other sexual organ of any person, such as surgically reconstituted genitalia, organs and/or removed genitalia

(i) Incites/instigates/compels the commission of any of the above crimes/acts on the person by another person

Under the circumstances falling under any of the following seven descriptions:-

Firstly - Against her/his will.
Secondly - Without her/his consent
Thirdly - With her/his consent when such consent has been obtained by deceit or fraud or putting her/him or any person in whom s/he is interested, in fear of death or of hurt.
Fourthly - A person does not consent to sexual activity if the activity occurs while s/he is affected by an intellectual, mental or physical condition or impairment of such a nature and degree that s/he cannot consent or refuse to consent to the activity.
Fifthly - With her/his consent when s/he is in a condition of intoxication or the administration by him personally or through another of any stupefying or unwholesome substance, s/he is unable to understand the nature and consequences of that action to which s/he gives consent.

Explanation II – For the purposes of this section “vagina” shall also include labia majora and reconstituted vagina.

SECTION 375C: SEXUAL ASSAULT ON CHILDREN.

(a) Introduces his penis or any body part or object to any extent into the vagina, the anus or urethra or mouth of any child;

Explanation I – For the purposes of this section “vagina” shall also include labia majora.

Explanation II – A child is a person below eighteen years of age.

PART D. AGGRAVATED SEXUAL ASSAULT

The need to address the realities of aggravated sexual assault, particularly in situations of communal, caste and other violence, and in areas under armed forces presence. This is especially important after Gujarat, the decade long struggle by Irom Sharmila and the women of Manipur, and other episodes of mass violence that have seen sexual violence as part of collective violence.

Aggravated sexual assault refers to sexual assault of a more grievous nature. It includes sexual assault that is committed

- By persons in a position of authority or trust;
- On women, children and persons who are in a disadvantaged/vulnerable position;
- As part of sectarian violence;
- That result in aggravated bodily harm.

NO REQUIREMENT OF PRIOR SANCTION OF THE GOVERNMENT IN A CASE OF SEXUAL ASSAULT BY A PUBLIC SERVANT

Exception: Notwithstanding anything contained in any other law for the time being in force, sexual assault in the situations mentioned below shall constitute an exception to sections 45 and 197 Cr. P.C. and any other provision in any law which requires prior sanction of the Government for prosecution of the public servant or a member of the armed forces.

- Custodial sexual assault as defined under Sec.376(2)
- sexual assault in situations of sectarian violence/mass crimes/communal violence
• sexual assault in coercive circumstances

Rationale: Given the complete impunity that state functionaries enjoy in cases of sexual assault because of the requirement of prior sanction from the government for prosecution, a modification in the existing provision is proposed that would safeguard the public servant from malicious or frivolous prosecution.

The Criminal law Amendment Bill 2010, proposes in CHAPTER II AMENDMENT OF THE INDIAN PENAL CODE Insertion of new section 166A “Public servant Disobeying direction under law.”

“166A. Whoever, being a public servant, -
(a) knowingly disobeys any direction of the law which prohibits him from requiring the attendance at any place of any person for the purpose of investigation into an offence or other matter, or

(b) knowingly disobeys, to the prejudice of any person, any other direction of the law regulating the manner in which he shall conduct such investigation, shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year or with fine or with both.”

It is proposed by us that the word “Knowingly” should be deleted from sec 166A (a) and (b). A disobedience of the mandate of law should be an offence in itself.

The following Proviso may be added to section 166A IPC

To provide adequate protection to the public servant from being wrongly implicated a Proviso should be added to this section which provides that the Court shall consider whether due diligence was exercised by the public servant and despite observance of all due care and compliance with the law the public servant could not fulfill the mandate of the law. This may be assessed by the Court at the initial stage of Charge and if the public servant is able to prima facie establish the above the Court shall honourably discharge him. The same shall however be a matter of judicial determination. It will not be within the purview of the Executive to grant or withhold sanction for prosecution of a public servant.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE INDIAN EVIDENCE ACT

(i) The court shall not draw any adverse inference on account of any delay in lodging the FIR or recording of the statements of the complainant and witnesses. The same shall be condoned by the Court if a reasonable explanation is given by the complainant/witness for the delay.

(ii) The court shall not draw any adverse inference on account of absence of a medical examination report of sexual assault in cases of sexual assault during mass crimes/sectarian violence. The Court shall take into consideration the coercive circumstances and the explanation presented by the prosecutrix.

(iii) In all cases of sexual assault during sectarian violence section 114A of the Indian Evidence Act will apply. Sexual violence in a communal/sectarian situation should be equated to custodial rape as the mob exercises complete control and is in a position of authority. Hence, the Bill should in cases of sexual violence during sectarian violence provide for enhanced punishment and also shift the burden of proof from the victim to the perpetrator.

(iv) Victim – survivor of sexual violence to be provided protection under the victim / witness protection regime.

SCHEME OF PUNISHMENT

THE SCHEME OF PUNISHMENT IS TO BE DETERMINED IN A GRADED MANNER SO AS TO REFLECT THAT SEXUAL VIOLENCE TAKES THE FORM OF A CONTINUUM WHILE ALSO RECOGNISING DEGREES OF SEVERITY OF THE CRIME.

WITNESS /VICTIM PROTECTION

Victims / survivors of sexual assault would be amenable to approaching the legal system and to give truthful testimonies only if the system guaranteed to protect their and their families’ privacy, security, identity and dignity. The UN Declaration of Basic Principles for Victims of Crime and Abuse of Power spells out victims’ rights as follows:¹

- The right to be treated with respect and recognition;
- The right to be referred to adequate support services;
- The right to receive information about the progress of the case;
- The right to be present and give input to the decision-making;
- The right to counsel;
- The right to protection of physical safety and privacy;
- The right of compensation, from both the offender and the State.

Through this amendment a Witness Victim protection regime to be developed in accordance with guidelines stated by the Supreme Court, reports of Law Commission of India including the 198th Law Commission Report and other existing standards of law. The Law Commission of India’s 198th Report, released in 2006, focuses on victim and witness protection. It has drafted a Bill on Witness Identity Protection (applicable during investigation and in court), as well as a detailed framework with elaborate rules of procedure for preventing the witness (including victim-survivors) from trauma and intimidation at the stages of investigation, during inquiry and before recording evidence at the trial, during the trial and post-trial. Some of the recommendations are significant and path-breaking for the manner in which they seek to balance the rights of the accused with the need for protecting the anonymity of the witness and the victim-survivor from further trauma.

A law on victim and witness protection should necessarily include the following components, all of which would need to be balanced with aspects of fair trial and rights of the accused:

- Preventing the identification of victims and witnesses to the public and media;
- Preventing further trauma to the victim-survivor caused by confronting the accused;
- Ensuring anonymity from the accused and defence counsel;
- Delaying the disclosure of witness identity prior to trial; and
- General measures concerning the protection of witnesses and victims prior to, during and subsequent to the trial (commencing from the stage of investigation and prosecution to conviction and appeal).

Victim and witness protection measures ought to specifically include:

- A guarantee of the safety, physical and psychological well-being, dignity and privacy of victim-survivors, witnesses and their families;
- Since family members are often at grave risk due to the testimony given in court, it is important to extend protective measures, security arrangements, counseling and other appropriate measures not only to victim-survivors and witnesses that appear before the court but also to their family members and other dependents;
- Protecting the identity of such persons from the media and public by conducting any part of the proceedings by video camera or allowing the presentation of evidence by electronic or other special means;
- A special obligation to protect women and child victims and witnesses, in particular, where the crimes involve sexual or gender-based violence; and
- A special effort to protect child victims and witnesses from further trauma through court proceedings, including by conducting any part of the proceedings by video camera or presentation of evidence by electronic means, as well as assigning a child-support person to assist the child through all stages of the proceedings, with the consent of the child’s parents or legal guardian.

The horizons of legal initiatives at victim and witness protection ought to extend beyond anonymity and allowances, keeping human dignity, respect, privacy and right against repeated trauma as its focal points.

A Victim –Witness Support Unit to be housed in the existing offices of the Legal Services Authority at the district and State level. It can comprise of paralegals, legal aid lawyers, NGO members by the Legal Services Authority. It shall be the duty and responsibility of the Investigating officer/Agency and the SPP to keep this unit informed of the progress of the case. The victims – witnesses will be regularly informed of the proceedings in their case and shall be apprised of court procedures etc.
